Darling Wifie:-

Just received your darling letter of Wednesday and believe me, honey love, if anything was appropriate that little clipping you enclosed, surely is. To use slang "that's just my sentiments", but with this correction; I don't miss you half as much as you miss me, but just as much, honey love. Just as much as one would miss his most valuable and priceless jewel. Honey love, you have no idea how I long for you, and how I long for the 10th of May, so I can greet you and hug you "already yet." Please God, 3 weeks from today and hour, you will be with me, eh, sweetheart, love? When I think that it would have only been 2 more weeks, I feel a pang; but, as that can't be helped, we must be satisfied with 3 weeks. Honey dear, I at times, feel as if the days are like centuries! If they would only pass quickly! I suppose it will, lovie, and before we know it, we'll be together. Dog-gone, but I sure will be happy! How about you, darling? (Foolish question #5674389).

Honey love, I suppose to-day, mondean is going to the hospital. I sure do wish she comes out all well, already. You can't imagine how angry I get when I hear mondean is taking care of herself. I certainly am glad that you made her go to the hospital. I know that while at home she is damning herself, especially now with Henry. Poor kid, he sure is delicate! Gee, I sure would love to give him a kiss right on his delicate sweet little lips! Do you know, love dear, for a boy, he sure has a sweet little mouth. As for my writing to mondean more often, I write at every opportunity I get. At times I haven't a minute to spare and sometimes just enough time to write you a few words. That's why my letters have been kind of short this week, but, honey love, the time will soon come, when no more writing letters, but that we can tell each other between hugs and kisses, eh, lovie?

I read Ada's letter, and dear, as soon as we are comfortably settled, we'll see what we can do for her. Of course, as you know, our duty is to mondean and the family first. I feel sure that we can do something for Ada here. Just last week I was talking to Printers about her. When you come, honey love, we will attend to her case. She sure deserves better luck, after all. When you write to her tell her that when she comes here, she won't laugh at the way I had the house fixed up. I suppose I'll fool you this time in that I am enclosing her letter. Didn't know but that you would want it.

As for myself, I am getting on just about the same. Yesterday my stomach kind of bothered me, but to-day it much better. No, honey love, Uncle Morris doesn't observe the holidays so I went without Seder. Oh, well, no use feeling blue over it, but when you are here, we'll observe them, eh, lovie? For winning that one, Uncle Morris and Solomon made me a gift of 6 beautiful shirts - $1 75/100 quality. I needed them badly and was about to buy some, when they got ahead of me. Pretty nice of them, what do you say?

Darling, you didn't tell me how much you love me. Don't you love me just a tiny bit? I sure do love to read of how much you love me. So don't forget. And never forget to take good care of yourself, hear?

Must close now, darling, with all my love to you, darling sweetest wife and miss all my hugs and kisses,

Your Even lovingly and longingly

Hubby
